Without a Home

He snapped around the bend on Henry Street.
Seconds later, high beam lights infringed in the cracked apartment window. The Ram's horn uproars the silent, cool midnight vibe. Quickly dodging shards of mirror glass in the carpet, Mom unpacked twice, then packed again.

Work shoes, toothbrushes, formula, my bookbag, and Em's diapers. She paused—gazed over at my sister in her car seat, drool dripping and glossing over her bunny.

My mom, stuck on Em, then me—
Her chickadees, she called us. Said we glowed.

The horn on his candy-apple red pickup blared on, so loud, Mom covered her ears fell into the floor and cried diamonds brighter than his broken glass, brighter than us, and she knew the answer right then—we weren't ready to go back to that empty house.
