Ablutions in the Dark

She is lowering herself into the tub, awkwardly with age. Sudden novas of pain indicating when to pause. Looking through the window, finally in water, warm, inviting forgetfulness she sees her distant husband bent over, spinning a stone, sharpening the spade & the harrow grinding that metal to hot flakes. Bright shower of fractured steel dancing around his boots. Like the idea of root. In the cool dark morning in April. Not for the field or some better capture of plants unwanted. But looking defeat in the eye and saying yes. But like this. Deeper and slower each day. Grinding away the effort. The exquisite tool of living. Of saying no. Outside the shed he stops and turns to the still house. Probably April. Widening bulbs of hydrangeas tossing in the wind louder than their abating love. More fluid than cooling bathwater.
Visiting Detroit

Reading Philip Levine
on a sun-drenched beach
a Wednesday day on Lake Michigan.
This morning a friend had messaged me offering up her afternoon
shift at the bar we both work.
Reading, reading. Trying ever so hard to ignore the words entirely.
